STRIKE OVER

By DAN BAVLY
Jerusalem Post Reporter

DEMOCRACY works on the no proper assumption that no one man is indispensable. Political parties within a democracy work on the same assumption, but not always with the same conviction. Just now, for example, it must be difficult for most members of the United States to admit that Mr. Eisenhower can be dispensed with conveniently. Obviously, from the point of view of the Republican Party as a whole, if not from that of Senator Knowland and his group, a presidential election without Dwight Eisenhower is a lost election.

SUCH a notion would be of little more than academic interest to the world at large if Americans were not, in a real sense, herself very much of that world at large — that is to say, if she were not the present or prospective prop for a large part of it and the most effective world influence to set against the world influence of Russia. Whether President Eisenhower himself be nominated for the Autumn presidential election or not, becomes, therefore, a matter of intimate concern to more countries and to a larger number of people than at any time since the world wondered who would follow Caesar as Caesar.

IN a way, it is extraordinary that the strike should be so far. It began last night at the White House and no American Empire stretches beyond the boundaries of the United States. Any country now more or less dependent on the United States can strip off its dependency if it wishes without the slightest fear of having to face a wrathful American army or attacking world-wide economic budget deficits. Behind that astonishing fact lies a source of power greater, perhaps, than any Empire ever had. It is, if you like, sheer, incredible wealth. But it is more than that. It is also a vitality of interest, part-interest and part attachment, which covers almost every kind of human endeavour and never backs, at hazard and which tries, usually at times and with many a mishap and rebuff, to revitalise much of the rest of the world, which may be growing old.

THE RESPONSE, in this new atomic age, no intelligent man can be indifferent to such a question as whether or not a President of the United States will run again. For here, in his fashion, is Caesar. And, not surprisingly, the Republican Party wants its own Caesar enthroned, not the Democratic Party's. Now, from all accounts the Republicans will have their way if Mr. Eisenhower runs again, and will not, if he does, go on to win another term. He, however, has refused to accept the nomination. According to Mr. Galling, 77 per cent of American voters think President Eisenhower has done his job well, 61 per cent want him to run again and 60 per cent think he will. These high figures come partly from the President's own popularity and partly from the fact that he is only one-half as good among his party's likely candidates.

GOV. DOWNEY, the present Chief Justice, Earl Warren, Senator Knowland and the brash Vice-President, Mr. Nixon, do not fit as substitutes for a President and not several top-flight men from outside to whom the responsible commentators seem to think Chief Justice Warren would stand a chance against Mr. Stevenson or Mr. Harriman or the remarkable Governor of Ohio, Mr. Frank John Lausche. But there seems no reason to suppose that Mr. Warren wants to give up his post as Chief Justice. The same cannot be said of these remaining Mr. Eisenhower; and now the President's physicians have said there is no medical reason why he should not take on another term of office in the White House, the pressure upon him to accept the Party's nomination has become stronger than ever.

WE shall know his decision; we very soon: a hard decision; for if to run again is will be almost surely against the interests of his health and therefore of his capacity to serve as a President from whom much is expected; and if to stand aside, it will be most certainly against the interests of his Party. Some commentaries think his judgment will be made according to the interests of the Presidency itself, which may be contrary to those of his Party.

Would Atom-Bomb U.S., Zhukov Warns

MOSCOW, Sunday (Reuter). — Marshal Georgi Zhukov, the Defence Minister, warned that Russia would not accept any limitation to an atomic war and would carry it to U.S. territory. He said it was absurd to believe that in any future war nuclear weapons would be confined to frontline tactical use. He was addressing the Communist Party Congress yesterday.

Such a limitation, he said, would involve the destruction of Europe. This was all very well, but the joint of the "certain circles" in the U.S. who hoped that war destruction would not touch continental North America.

He had said earlier: "The Soviet Union does not threaten anyone and is not going to attack anyone, but we are obliged to maintain such forces as are capable of defending the interests of our motherland in order to ensure that provocations by the enemy will not take us unawares." The Soviet armed forces now possessed "various atomic and hydrogen weapons, powerful rocket and jet armaments of various types, including long-distance rockets."

The final meeting, which came at the end of 24 hours of almost continuous consultations between the negotiators, began about 11 p.m. and lasted until the early hours of this morning. The negotiations were the special ministerial committee set up by the Cabinet to deal with the dispute, together with Messrs. M. Namir and A. Becker, and the members of the Strikers Coordinating Committee.

The Cabinet at its weekly meeting in the morning had authorised acceptance of the Coordinating Committee's proposal to accept one-third of the 1956 increases, and on the next refusal of strike pay remained an outstanding issue.

A compromise was finally reached when the strikers offered to work overtime.

It is understood that yesterday's Cabinet meeting was the start of Mr. Tito's letter, which was influenced by the desire on its part to return to the Progressive Party to the Cabinet. The writer now seems apparently to have been appointed to the Cabinet as Minister of Justice.

Following conclusive results from yesterday's earlier meeting between the strike leaders and Government Ministers, Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion met with Dr. Z. Avigdor, Chairman of the Israel Medical Association, twice in the morning and then twice with Mr. M. Lev Eshkol, the Finance Minister. Mr. Ben-Gurion also met with Professors G. Rakach and N. Rotenstreich. Prof. I. Barzilai, Minister of Health met Dr. I. Grabiner, Chairman of the committee of doctors in Government employ.

It was made clear in these meetings that the professional workers could not accept the Government's unilateral decision to cut their 1956 salary increases by 40 per cent. As a gesture of goodwill, however, they offered to agree to withholding one-third of the increases. They added that the U.S. did not intend to make any new offer.

In Jerusalem last night, the groundswell of a Professions Union was laid. This union will include all those striking plus teachers with University degree.

The Coordinating Committee said that establishing such a union, preferably within the Histadrut, would eliminate the recurrence of mistakes made by the strike leadership.

The Jerusalem and Haifa secondary school teachers are to return to work today after their solidarity strike. It is learned that the teachers are preparing to present salary demands similar to those submitted by other professionals.

LABOUR GROUPS URGE STRIKERS TO RETURN

A plenary session of the Jerusalem Labour Council yesterday adopted a resolution calling on strikers to return to work immediately.

The doctors and professional workers were asked to "pressurise from the control of the Right which is interested in breaking up the united front of all workers in the country." They urged them to renew their contact with the Histadrut and fight for better working conditions and pay within the organization.

Mr. Abraham Becker, head of the Trade Union Department of the Histadrut, addressed the meeting.

BRITISH PALESTINE APPEAL NETS $850,000

LONDON, Sunday (INA). — Last night's dinner inaugurating the 10th Joint Palestine Appeal brought in $850,000, the largest sum ever raised by the Appeal in one night. Sir Simon Marks, Chairman of the Appeal, has announced. The fund-raising pattern was being repeated all over the country, he added.

The broadcast said that President Manuel Odri had ordered the immediate release of arrested newspapermen not involved in offense punishable by law.

GREEKS VOTE IN Crucial Election

ATHENS, Sunday (Reuter). — Silent queues formed outside polling stations today as Greeks voted in a crucial election which Premier Constantine Karamanlis has called "the nation's battle against Communism." Peals and orders prevailed throughout the country, and officials predicted that about four million persons — 80 per cent of the electorate — would vote.

Women, casting their first votes in a general election, joined the rush to the polls around midday.

Yesterday's PressDifferences on Controller's Report

"Davar" (Histadrut) writes that those who had expected to find some jucy morsels in the Controller's annual report will no doubt be sorely disappointed, for while it does list several faults it points to an appreciable improvement in the working of the State machinery. The paper adds that the longer the Controller's critics will grieve over glaring defects, for it is these that are the Controller's business, rather than giving marks of merit. On the whole, the Report reflects a growing tendency to co-operate between the Controller and the administrative elements of the State. The Controller is bound to guarantee the continuance of the standard of Government services.

"Al ha-Shanah" (Mapam) says that the Controller is right in saying that basic adjustments in public administration should be carried out in line with a legal rule enacted by him to his own satisfaction. The Controller's critics will get into a rut. This approach should be scrapped so that the Controller's query, "Does the present Report show an advance on last year?" will cease to be a rhetorical question.

The American embargo on arms delivered to the U.S.S.R. (World Mizrahi), shows a lack of stability and consistency in U.S. policy and leads the objective observer to conclude that the State Department is hesitant and confused. The despatch of tanks to Syria has been justified on the cause of Israeli representations but rather as a result of British pressure against increasing Saudi strength in Transjordan and Jordan.

"Herut" writes that for the hundred and first time it has demonstrated that one concession leads to another and that defeatism only induces more defeatism. By announcing the suspension of the Jordan operation our Prime Minister has played into the hands of the Americans who not only do not have to offer arms as the price for the project's shelving but can even place a total embargo on the spare parts that used to come with fault.

"Ha'oketz" (General Zionist)

writes that nobody can expect offices to be run without a slip

or two that have pointed out the shore or below freezing point since players and fans enjoyed the element of surprise in neck and neck between Accrington Stanley, who beat Wrexham 3-2, and Grimsby Town, who claimed Oldham Athletic, 3-1, both having 60 points.

WHILST Tel Aviv seems to be lining up for "Hele of Troy,"

Jerusalem's Homeric season has begun with "Ulysses" (Zion).

Mr. Harold Macmillan, the new Chancellor of the Exchequer, shocked Britain on Friday with tough new measures to curb spending by the public and industry.

In what amounted to a miniature budget only a few weeks before he is due to submit the national budget policy for the year, the Chancellor made these moves to check inflation:

1. Steeply increased the basic people's tax on bread by a half penny a

pint;

2. cut the Government subsidy

on bread by one penny on the 7½ penny loaf and raised the price of milk by a half penny a

pint;

3. restricted stockpiling of goods for home defence; and

4. introduced a new

tax on beer, wine and spirits.

A lot of serious research has obviously been done for the settings

and the endings of the play.

Labour members of the Commmons, where the Chancellor listed his moves, angrily shouted "shame" and "design" when he learned that the bread and milk

were to be increased by a half penny a pint.

Child Hurt by Fireworks; Ban Expected after Purim

A by-law regulating the sale and use of fireworks in Jerusalem is expected to be gazetted only after the Purim holiday, the Municipality spokesman said yesterday.

The year's first accident as a result of children playing with fireworks occurred yesterday when six-year-old Zalman Shoshan, of Rehov Ben Zion, Jerusalem, was taken to Hadassah Hospital after he was wounded by the left eye by a shot from a boy cap pistol. The pistol was discharged by an 11-year-old playmate.

The spokesman said that the by-law was submitted to the Ministry of Interior for approval. Two months ago, the Municipality queried the Ministry on the fate of the law and was told that it had been approved. Another query elicited the reply that it would be published only after Purim owing to difficulties arising out of the present strike.

Motzai Karta Come To Rehavia Cave

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Several hundred positive students yesterday took advantage of the fall silence over Jerusalem to visit the Hasmonean burial cave, discovered two months ago in the Rehavia Quarter.

Lining the barbed-wire enclosure to the disinterment of the policemen stationed on guard, they claimed that they had come to see that "no desecration of Jewish graves takes place."

Disregarding police instructions, they blocked traffic in the area. Measures to restrain them among them Mr. Eli Bar, warden of the Motzai Karta Club, were detained overnight by the police on charges of disturbing the peace. It was learned.

Excavations on the site were halted a week ago when the Chief Rabbi objected to what he felt was a desecration of Jewish graves. In the meantime, the Department of Antiquities had to make arrangements to remove the rapid deterioration through dampness of the 2,000-year-old remarkably well-preserved drawings of a sea shell.

Ministry for Religious Affairs sources said last night that excavations of the tomb, which contain additional burial niches, will be restricted on religious grounds.

Findings to date include a number of oil-wick lamps, parts of perfume jars and a coin from the time of the Second Temple. One polished bone, a shank of a child with the numbers one to six engraved into the bone, much as they are in present day dice, was also discovered.

An interesting hypothesis is that it was used by the grave robbers when splitting up their loot, and was left forgotten on the floor.

The Committee for the Preservation of Historic Sites, a joint effort of the Ministries for Religious Affairs and Antiquities, is expected to decide today on whether to purchase the plot or, if it is learned yesterday,

The Mayor upheld the ban. Only enough had been allocated to public gardens to keep alive what had been planted, and the reduction in expenditure for cultural purposes was almost too drastic, he said.

The Town Council also approved the proposed tax rates announced by the High Court of Justice in Jerusalem yesterday ruled that there was no reason to delay the preliminary investigation of the building and its location.

There was a lively debate on whether the business tax should be raised to 100 milion, or reduced to IL 4,000. Operations were divided evenly between the coalition, and estimates varied between IL 100,000 and IL 500,000.

The Council also approved the rearing of the Watertower Square (Kikar Hamigdal) on Mt. Carmel to Heinrich Heine Street. The change was opposed by all three Governmental Councillors, whose spokesman said that Heine had "run away from the Jewish front" and did not deserve to have a street named after him.

The two religious councillors were also against naming the square after Heinrich Heine.
